Forth from eyes that weep

And cannot sleep,
Though night is on the sea—
But through the haze,
Still straining gaze,
To catch one last and lingering look of Rhoda's isle and thee!

Why am I grieving ?-tearful leaving Rhoda's rocky Island ?

I've strayed through scenes were fairer far in wild wood, wave, and highland.
And still my heart
Was fain to part—Still yearned again to roam—
But this new change is very strange!

Tis like a second leaving of my own far island home.

Is it for friends I grieving leave, and leaving grieve so sadly?

Ah! no-cold friendship never caused my brain to burn so madly— The tearful eye
The fearful eigh
The heart, so sad and sore,
Proclaim regret,
That's only met
When loving hearts, at parting, feel that they may meet

Haply, from yender turret bends a dark eye o'er the Haply, to-night that eye will stain the soft and snowy pillow—

Oh! it is blies Believing this!
Believing Aer so true!
A soothing joy,
That hall destroys
The dark alloy of grief I feel, at bidding her adieu!
Off Point Judith, Aug. 25th, 1846 MAYNE REID.

FORT LARAMIE, June 28, 1846.

My last letter was dated at the Twin Springs, where we had encamped in a most beautiful place, and near which a large buffalo had been killed. The next day we reached the junction of the north and south forks, which form the great Platte We travelled up the south fork four or five miles, when we crossed that stream, which was done not without some little difficulty, it being at this place nearly a mile wide, and deeper than usual, owing to the late rains. We arrived at the ford about the middle of the afternoon, and by sundown the wagons were all over, the water in many places coming above the wagon beds. The next day we travelled up the south fork ten miles. and encamped. This is a most beautiful stream There are no islands in it as in the Platte-the bluffs are smooth—the bottom lands from three to five miles wide, gently sloping down to the water's edge. Timberless, the prairies make a broad sweep over the biuffs, up and down the valey, and across the broad river, which winds its silver course through as lovely a scene as the eye ey, and across the broad river, which winds its silver course through as lovely a scene as the eye ever dwelt upon.

From this point the road leaves the river and rans to the north fork. A distance of fifteen miles brought us to "Ash Hollow," one of the most remarkable places we had seen on our route. The level prairie over which we had travelled nearly all day, suddenly sunk down into a deep gorge. It was a wild dell, and I was told had been the battle ground of the Sioux and Pawness. For five miles our wagons wound around among hills and steep declivities to a little spring, half a mile from the north fork. Here we stopped to enjoy a refreshing draught of water after the fatigues of the day, in riding through this valley of sand and water. At this river we found a company of twenty wagons encamped. They had had considerable sickness, and this day had baried one of their number. We continued up the north branch some three miles, when we encamped for the night. We heard to day that Dunbar's company of 20 wagons, which had left ours a week or ten days previously, had gone up the south fork further than we had, for the purpose of finding a better crossing, but that the water had risen so that it was impossible for them to cross. Their only way of getting across will be to kill buffalo, take their skins, and make what is nalled "bull boats," and with small freights in each, they will thus be able to get over. Most of our company felt pained at leaving this Oregon party behind, particularly our young men, as there were many foir and amiable young ladies among them. The next day we travelled over a sandy road most of the way. About 10 A. M. the Chimney Rock was discovered, some forty miles distant. I saw it. It looked like a small spire, standing out in bold relief against the sky. Two days more we reached this celebrated rock, and arrived opposite to it about noon. Its height was variously estimated by our guessing company, from two to eight hundred feet. I suppose it to be three hundred feet high. It is round, gen called it the Court House, others the Fortress, and others the Castle Tower. But before describing this, it may be necessary to give you some idea of this valley of the Platte, which possesses many and singular peculiarities.

In one of my former letters, I have noticed the rough and hilly nature of its bluffs. In travelling up the river to Fort Laramie, I have remarked that their knobs, or hills, or bluffs, or whatever else they may be called, are only to be found up an one side of the river at a time, sometimes on one side and then on the other. Consequently, while one side presents a rough, ragged appearance, the other is smooth and even as a gently undulating lawn. The wagons will often wind along under these bluffs, and, in their broken appearance, you can trace houses, castles, towns, and every thing which the imagination can conceive. These suddenly disappear, and the bluffs become smooth and even; but the ragged bluffs, with their castles and towers, are again seen upon the opposite side of the river, where they appear in greater splendor, as 'in 'distance lenus enchantment to the view." This was the case before reaching the "court house," but here they suddenly jumped across the stream, and the first building we saw, was the immense mass on the tops of the bluffs, 200 feet above the river. There it sood, solitary and alone, in solemn grandeur. It looked to me very much like the forts on Governor's or Staten Island, and seems to have been placed there for the express puroose of guarding the genii and spirits which dwell in the caverns and deep recesses of the ragged peaks, which immediately follow in its train, and line the bluffs up as far as Fort Laramie.

I have to leave this part of my subject, as well as my letter, unfinished, for want of time. I may finish it in a day or two. I send this by a party of Californians on their return to the "States."

A New Speculation.—Last week several citizens appeared before Judge Ulshoeder, at chambers, and stated to him they had been summoned as jurors, at the same time producing the summons that had been served upon them. The Judge, recollecting that all the juries had been discharged at the close of the July term, sent for Sheriff Jones, and, showing him the summonses, asked him if a jury panel had been drawn. The Sheriff replied in the negative, and pronounced the summonses to be rank forgeries. It turned out, upon further inquiry, that the person who served the summonses, or some one in connection with him, induced some of the persons summoned to pay $16 for a certificate to exempt them from jury duty. The mode in which this was done was to procure a certificate of a militia officer, or to fill up a blank certificate, and afterwards forge the officer's name to it, making it appear that the person summoned as a juror belonged to a militia company.

We have very little of interest to notice in the stock market. Prices still continue very much depressed and there appears to be very little disposition to make operations to any extent. Both boards are pretty well filled up, most of the members having returned from the wa-tering places, and we think there must be a movement of some kind made very soon. Some of the brokers are not making their salt, while others are operating among themselves, with the idea that they can make something out of each other. They will soon find out their mistake, and may then make some effort to get up some take, and may then make some effort to get up something to draw in the outsiders.

The rapid depreciation in the market value of Morris Canal, has had a tendency to frighten outside specula tors, and it will be very difficult to bring them again into the market. A few more such movements as that recently made in Morris, will drive away all the outsiders and leave the brokers in Wall street to fleece each other to their satisfaction. The bondholders of the Morris are making a desperate effort to get hold of the canal for the amount of their bonds, but they will fail in their object. It is not impossible but that the bondholdors may even lose their lein on the canal as the stockholders have it in their power to make and sustain the plea of even lose their lein on the canal as the stockholders have it in their power to make and sustain the plea of usury. In the event of their doing so the bondholders will have a poor look for their investment. It is also stated that the bondholders are buying up the stock at the depreciation for the purpose of saving their bonds. It is at present impossible to tell what will be the result of all the movements, there is very little doubt, however, but that the stockholders will come out of this operation much more favorably than they did out of the last. Under the most salverse circumstances the stockholders will come out of the last. much more invortedly than they did not of the last. Under the most adverse circumstances the stockholders cannot be called upon to pay more than eight dollars a share, which will give them the causl completely clear from debt. Before doing this, however, efforts will be made to repudiate the debt. which we trust, under the circumstan-ces, will be successful. This has been a swindling affair from one end to the other, and the stockholders will be justified in pleading usury or anything else to throw off he indebtedness.

We annex a table exhibiting the quotations for certain We annex a table exhibiting the quotations for certain stocks in this market, for each day of the past week, and at the close of the market of the week previous. There has been no material alteration in any of the funcies, ex-cept Morris Canal, which has fallen from 8% to 6½, be-ing a decline of about twenty-five per cent. There is so little doing in the stock market that prices cannot fluc tuate very much.

Vicksburg, 1/2.

There appears to be very little falling off, or variation in any way, in the weekly receipts of the Philadelphia and Reading Reilroad Company. We annex a comparative statement of the business of the road during the fourth week of August in the past three years.

Total......$16,870.50 28,878.73 Coal Trans. Tons. 12,368 23,696

50,742 02

The total quantity of coal transported over this road from the mines to tide water, from the 1st of January to the 27th of August, 1846, was 759,836 tons. In the year the 27th of August, 1848, was 759,530 tons. In the year 1845, 800,000 tons were transported. It thus appears that the coal business of eight months this year amounts to mearly as much as for the whole of last. There are yet four months left of this year, in two of which the coal business will be very large. It is estimated that about four hundred and fifty thousand tons will be brought to tide water ever this road before the close of the case. of the year. This will swell the aggregate tonage of 1846, to about twelve hundred thousand, and show an increase in this part of the business of the company of about fifty per cent. The aggregate receipts of the company of the year, compared with last, will show a greater per cent increase than this, as the charges for and have not been subject to those fluctuations, there having been no opposition to the road this season, the Schuylkill Canal undergoing an enlargement. The monopoly the railroad company have enjoyed this year, has had a very important and favorable influence upon the income which has probably been as large as they can expect to realize for several years, should the canal get once more into eperation. The railroad has had the coal business of the Schuylkill region to itself this year.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

TELEGRAPHIC.

BALTIMORE, Sunday Evening. Information has been received in this city that Santa Anna sailed for Sisal, instead of Vera Cruz, which accounts for his non-arrival at the latter place previous to the leaving of the steamer Mississippi.

Letters from Santa Fe, dated July 17, state that a special session of the Council was called relative to the approach of Gen. Kearney. There were 600 soldiers in the place, and 1,000 on their way from the lower counties, and report states that they can raise 15,000 in ten days. Fortifications were building; but the probability is that no resistance will be made.

BY THE MAILS.

Washington, August 29, 1846. Whig Organization-An Appeal to the Democracy -Future Events-Present Condition of the Administration-A New Democratic Paper-Chief

Naval Constructor-Recruiting Service. It is a fact, not to be denied, that large numbers of whig speeches are now being printed in this city, and efreulated under frank. During this month seventy-five thousand were folded and enveloped, and the superintendent expects two hundred thousand more as soon as the press can work them off! This is a slight indication that the political elements are at work, and, as one of the papers says, that "the whigs stands animis opi-busque parati." It is true that the documents are folded and wrapped in paper at the public expense; but this should not be a matter of combusque parati." It is true that the documents are folded and wrapped in paper at the public expense; but this should not be a matter of complaint, for, with the appointment, occasionally, of a few whig cierks in the departments, this is all the whigs can expect to receive under the present administration. Mr. Secretary Walker remained in this city during the recess of 1844, and did the very thing of which Mr. Ramsey is charged as guilty. The best of the story is, that Mr. Dickens, the Secretary of the Senate, assisted him; but when Mr. Dickens was subsequently a candidate for re-election, the democratic Senators, with two or three exceptions, (among them Mr. Benton,) voted for somebody from Pennsylvania, and Mr. Dickens barely squeezed in by whig votes! Both parties have always sent away documents at the public expense, and the cry now raised is nothing more than a political trick, which will be repeated throughbut the country.

What is to be done in the premises? Will not the cackling of geese save Rome? "Why cannot," asks the editor of the Union, "the Democratic Association of Washington again assemble, appoint a committee to ascertain the movements of the whigs, and report upon the best means which can be appointed to counteract them?" The Democratic Association, composed of unwavering and patriotic gentlemen, at their own expense, sent away hundreds of thousands of docursents in 1844; and, although people may laugh, did more than the present members of the cabinet, towards placing Mr. Polk in the Presidential chair. Some of these gentlemen obtained situations in the departments; but Governor Randall threw his up, because Mr. Bancroft required him to act in the capacity of an ostler; and he wrote the Secretary a letter which has not, nor ever will be, made public. Mr. Seignstack smells as strongly of democracy as he does of paint; but the circumstance of his wearing a green baizo jacket, and being a little deaf, prevented him from obtaining the office of Commissioner of public buildings. He was recommended t dozen members wanted me to start a democratic paper; which invitation I gratefully declined. Mr. Rives was applied to; the gentleman who waited on him, endeavored to point out the ne-cessity for the Globe, revived; it was, they said, the only means by which the democratic party cessity for the Globe, revived; it was, they said, the only means by which the democratic party could be united, and future success secured. They were dissatisfied with the course of Mr. Ritchie, and did not conceive that he was acting in good faith towards all sections of the Union, but in good faith towards all sections of the Union, but in good faith towards the Union newspaper, and those whose peculiar interess the official paper should support. This is not rumor, but fact, so far as the information from twenty members of Congress, or more, can be credited. But what did Mr. Rives say to all this? It is not the time, gentlemen. Messrs. Blair and Rives have wealth a large printing-office, myriads of influential friends, and have not been treated as they desired at the hands of the President. They are under no obligation not to revive the daily Globe. They print the Congressional Globe, and have years the start of Mr. Ritchie's Congressional Register, which he proposes to publish to compensate for the withdrawal of the public printing alter the present Congress. Although the "Union" has fifteen thousand subscribers, the list, we are told, must be still considerably enlarged to enable the proprietors to sustain all its usefulness, and to insure them against pecuniary loss.

The administration, and Mr. Ritchie, and all concerned, may not credit the assertion now; but before the expiration of six months there will be another democratic paper in Washington, sustaining old Jacksonian principles. The editor, concerned, may not credit the assertion now; but before the expiration of six months there will be another democratic paper in Washington, sustaining old Jacksonian principles. The editor, that is be, has left the city for the North. The event is just as certain as a firm pre-determination can make it. What may occur to prevent it cannot now be conceived. This may, coming from an anonymous source, be disregarded; but none can tell whence the wind emanates. However, it must and will be feit.

There appears very little on the surface of politics in Washington, but there are subterranean movements which in due time may be developed. A rendezvous has been opened near the market house for recruits to fill up the fifth regiment of United States infantry, which was almost destroyed by the consolidation of its meterical to complete the number of men in other companies, required by the act of Congress passed at the last session. A rendezvous is also open for enlistments in the dragoon service. Our surplus population are now in Mexico, and therefore but few have been attracted by the music of the drum and file to the taverns, the doors of which are adorned by the stars and stripes of our country.

A large number of applications have been made for the office of Chief Naval Constructor, rendered vacant by the death of Mr. Humphreys; of course well backed by recommendations and personal influence; but the Secretary of the Navy will not appoint one, as there is no authority of law for doing so. There are four or five who act in this capacity; and whenever it may be necessary, any one of them can be especially employed by the Department.

PHILADELPHIA, August 30, 1846. We are at last enjoying a most splendid day; the sun beaming down upon us with summer heat, and scarcely a cloud to be seen to hide its about to embark on board the vessel, was found about noon to-day, in the river abreast of the Navy Yard, and at least two miles from where the fatal accident occurred.

John M. Coleman, Esq., has been nominated by the whigs of the third district, as their candidate for Congress. Mr. Coleman was formerly superintendent of one of the grammar schools in that district.

A large portion of our colored population have leit the city for Chester and Wilmington, to attend the camp meeting at the former, or the quarterly meeting at the latter place. All the boats that have left the city yesterday or to-day, for either place, have been literally blackened with them; they scarcely had more than standing room on board.

Two boys named Kemp were considerably burned, this morning, by an explosion of a quantity of powder, with which they were playing that the fire. The affair happened in Southwark, and gave rise to an alarm of fire, which attracted all the firemen from the upper districts
